

It takes the extremal values, first and last, of the box-counting space occupation, specifically in each grid for each island 1, 2 and total.

It changes successively the box-counting space occupation, in each grid for each island simultaneously to get all possible combinations.

It calculates the fractal dimension for each island of the different combinations or prototypes.

Simultaneously it counts all combinations or prototypes.