

Figure A2. Example figure illustrating the difference between averaging latitude and longitude (black cross), taking the median of latitude and longitude (red cross) and calculating the minimum sum of all distances (geographic median) to all other locations (blue cross) around an inaccessible area (grey circle). Both averaging as well as the median results in placing the so calculated position inside the inaccessible area while the geographic median is placed outside this area as it represents one of the original locations.