$n = 6$

The graph shows the relationship between the number of missing values and specificity (%). The data points are represented with error bars indicating variability. The graph suggests a trend where specificity decreases as the number of missing values increases, but with some variability around the mean values.