The chart illustrates the frequency distribution of Euclidean distances for two categories: orphans (blue) and nematode homologs (gray). The x-axis represents the Euclidean distance, while the y-axis shows the frequency. The distribution peaks at lower distances, indicating a higher frequency of shorter distances for both categories.