Figure 3
Estimated contour plots of offspring survival as a function of number of deviations (“biases”) in ovulation sequence. Response to A) critical temperature days in Montana population (n = 128 nests), and B) number of mites at nest site in Arizona population (n = 96 nests during mite season). Numbers show proportion of nestlings fledged out of the number of eggs laid. Shown is only first breeding episode for each female.