The graph shows the change in R allele frequency over generations under different conditions:

- Black triangle: Standard lab conditions
- Black square: Temephos exposed
- Black circle: Cold temperature

Key:
- a: Significantly different from the previous generation
- b: Significantly different from the next generation

The data indicates a fluctuating trend in allele frequency, with variations observed across generations under different conditions.