 captivity and restraint, which can be stressful for animals. These factors can lead to increased cortisol levels and other stress hormones, which can have negative impacts on the animal’s immune system, overall health, and reproductive fitness.