The graph illustrates the seed starch content measured in milligrams per gram dry weight (mg/g DW) under control and drought stress conditions for various populations. The populations are classified into three categories: mapping population, genebank accessions, and breeding lines. Each population is represented by a set of bars, with different colors denoting control and drought stress conditions.