The scatter plot illustrates the relationship between the average systolic blood pressure by the two devices and the difference in systolic blood pressure between the two devices. The data points are scattered across the plot, indicating a distribution of measurement differences across various average blood pressure levels.