The graph shows the average error of inner and outer contour measurements. The x-axis represents the parameter $d$, and the y-axis represents the average error in millimeters. The data points indicate that the error increases with $d$.

- Average inner contour error is represented by gray circles.
- Average outer contour error is represented by black circles.