Maladaptive shift in body fat distribution leads to dysfunctional subcutaneous adipose tissue which results in a decrease in lipogenesis (1), lipid retention (2), and adipogenesis (3). Repeated stress causes a decrease in the cytokine milieu (↑ IL-1β), leading to increased visceral adipose tissue deposition and a shift in visceral:non-visceral fat mass.