Certainty

- accessibility of mental health care
- patient flow possibilities
- independent living for the elderly
- role of relatives in empowerment of mentally vulnerable people
- freedom of choice for mental health care patients
- different care demand of the elderly in the future
- differentiation in supply

Uncertainty

- effects of technological developments
- market forces in (mental) health care

Low impact

- empowerment of mentally vulnerable people

High impact

- increasing care demand in autism
- co-morbidity of mental and somatic problems
- stigmatization of mental health care
- acceptance of mental health care patients in society
- social tolerance level
- separation of residence and care
- available labor force
- future of the Exceptional Medical Expenses Act
- Social Support Act for people with mental health problems
- political developments
- availability of sufficient financial resources
- possibilities of successful integration of people with mental health problems

much certainty, low impact much certainty, high impact little certainty, low impact little certainty, high impact