All the cities were classified into five levels/groups based on ten socio-economic indicators

Sample cities were randomly selected from each group

From the sample cities, 5 street offices were randomly selected

From sample street offices, two residential committee catchments were selected

From the catchment area of each residential committee, 60 households were randomly selected

All the members in each household were interviewed using standard questionnaires