The graph shows the percentage of viability (in percentage) of HepG2 and Chang’s liver cells as a function of the log concentration of an extract (in µg mL⁻¹). The x-axis represents the log concentration, while the y-axis represents the percentage of viability. The data points indicate a decrease in viability as the log concentration increases, with HepG2 showing a steeper decline compared to Chang’s liver.