Figure 3: Graphical user interfaces of the instrument in the PDA environment. The software allows for the description of the characteristics of the patient and the results of the exam (A), and the data acquisition provides signal presentation and transference of the data between the patients’s PDA, the server and the remote computer (B). Medical recommendations may also be received by the patients (C).