Based on participants' responses to the following 2 questions (one included 99% and one included 50%):
If a new product provided nicotine in a way that was almost as satisfying as smoking, could be used without anyone noticing that you were using it and reduced your health risks by [99%] [50%], would you consider switching to this product?