Potential risk factors associated with disease X and disease Y can be categorized into risk factors that are not associated with the respective diseases and potential risk factors. The degree of association of a given risk factor to a disease is used to understand the base knowledge about a given disease. Figure 2: Model for the distribution of associated factors of a given disease.