An elusive gene candidate, Parapinopsin, was identified in the analysis of predicted peptide sequences. This gene is predicted to be homologous to the Opsin protein family but does not belong to the Opsin gene family. The alignment of homologous sequences revealed conserved amino acids, suggesting potential for further study in understanding the evolutionary relationships within this gene family.