Reviewer’s report

Title: The First Clinical Case due to AP92 like strain of Crimean-Congo Hemorrhagic Fever Virus and A Field Survey

Version: 4  Date: 15 October 2008

Reviewer: Anna Papa

Reviewer’s report:

Although the information concerning material of the study can be found somewhere in the text, it would be very useful if all Material will be as a section before the Methods, as I suggested previously.

In Figure 1, the proportions are not given. I had suggested as an example "14/420, 3.33%". By this way, the reader will validate easily the positivity.

Title has to include at least the country, better the city, as well. Not "field survey" but "serosurvey"

Level of interest: An article whose findings are important to those with closely related research interests

Quality of written English: Needs some language corrections before being published

Statistical review: No, the manuscript does not need to be seen by a statistician.
