Reviewer’s report:

Major Compulsory Revisions:
1. There is need for the author to correct errors in the content of the conclusion section: both in the abstract and the main article.

2. There are enormous grammatical errors in this version which undermine the quality of the article. These require a comprehensive approach to their revision.

Minor Essential Revision:
3. Consider presenting results by outcome of interest, since there are three outcomes. This could reduce confusion to the reader.

4. Consider investigating for collinearity between the exposure variables 'Education and formal employment', 'Formal employment and Income', 'Income and Education'. Each regression model should not contain collinear items (see details in attached report).

Discretionary Revisions:
5. Consider discussing unexpected results such as 'Higher education is associated with lower male involvement'. What may be the plausible reasons within the study setting?
