Reviewer's report

Title: A qualitative study of pharmacy nurse providers of community based post-birth care in Queensland, Australia

Version: 1  Date: 5 February 2013

Reviewer: Carol Wilkins

Reviewer's report:

This is a clear, well written and informative paper that provides a sound addition to our knowledge and highlights another problematic and concerning aspect of postpartum care today. The data have been explored well and emergent themes clearly illustrate the essential considerations surrounding pharmacy nurse provision of care to women and families.

The paper concludes by raising a concern regarding best practice. It may have been helpful if the authors had suggested measures that might be taken in the future to overcome this, bearing in mind the benefits such as easily accessible care and continuity of care which might be maximised in a more structured and regulated setting.

The authors have not identified any limitations to their study.
