Version: 3 Date: 5 June 2012

Reviewer's report:

The authors offer an interesting view of several innovative aspects of pediatric integrative medicine (PIM), considered one of the newest sub-specialties in pediatrics.

The aspects of a holistic and personalised approach to the needs of the "modern child" are accurately underscored in various parts of the work. The investigation carried out on the quality and quantity of the training processes that include PIM, highlights the need to review the profiles of the training processes in pediatric academic structures.

I consider this work a useful and valid proposal for all readers, above all for those responsible for training young students and residents, and for anyone involved in promoting a new pediatric culture
