Reviewer's report

Title: Intervention mapping for development of an implementation strategy for the insurance medicine guideline on depression

Version: 2 Date: 20 July 2010

Reviewer: Sallie Pearson

Reviewer's report:

I believe the authors have improved the paper significantly and managed to clarify many of the concerns I raised in my original review. That said I still believe it remains a little hard to read in parts, is still somewhat parochial and is probably still too long for my liking. However if the journal believes it is of broad enough interest to its audience then I endorse its publication.

Minor Essential Revisions: Editorial polish to the text. It is still very clunky in parts.

Level of interest: An article whose findings are important to those with closely related research interests

Quality of written English: Needs some language corrections before being published

Statistical review: No, the manuscript does not need to be seen by a statistician.