Reviewer’s report:

I read the new submitted paper which you kindly sent to me.

I appreciate the authors responded to most of the issues I pointed out in my previous revision. In particular they decided to turn their paper into a letter (or debates as for your BMC-Public Health).

This decision would removed all my concerns about publication, as they are mainly due to the nature of publication, which mainly consists of already published data, and the methodological issues, in particular the paper does not report the way how the authors conducted the systematic review and reached consensuses about guidance. Indeed, both types of concerns can apply to letters.
