Reviewer’s report:

Thank you for the opportunity to consider the revisions to this manuscript. I am satisfied that the authors have addressed most of the issues raised in my first review.

However, they assert in their response to the reviewers that the etiological relationships found in their study are unlikely to differ across sociodemographic groups, ie, that they would still hold in a more representative sample of children and parents. This, in my opinion, discounts the important influence of culture and the complexities of family and living environments. It should be acknowledged (in the limitations) that the relationships found in this study may not be the same in a more demographically diverse and representative population.
