Version: 3 Date: 15 February 2013

Minor essential revisions

1. Include statistical significance in Abstract and results.

2. The introduction lacks depth. Vegetable and fruit consumption are driven by different determinants, and are integrated into diets in different ways – they should be dealt with separately in the introduction (as they are in the methods, results and discussion). For example, Rheinharts has published on this.

3. Since vegetable consumption is more consistently inferior to recommendations, consider using the term “vegetable and fruit” rather than “fruit and vegetable”.

4. Methods – Please explain exactly how randomization (between and within schools) was conducted.
