Reviewer’s report

Title: Influenza vaccination coverage rates among adults before and after the 2009 influenza pandemic and the reasons for non-vaccination in Beijing, China: a cross-sectional study

Version: 5 Date: 14 September 2012

Reviewer: Alison Bish

Reviewer’s report:

I appreciate the authors resubmitting their paper and responding to my previous comments. I feel that they have answered each point adequately. However, the paper still contains errors in use of language and grammar so made need further editing. For example, on page 3 in the background section they say that vaccination campaigns were ‘adapted’ – do they mean adopted or developed? Furthermore do they mean intention to be vaccinated and actually undergoing vaccination when they write ‘low acceptance of vaccine or vaccine uptake rates’. On page 8 there is a frequent use of the word ‘phenomenon’ which is somewhat out of place.

Level of interest: An article of importance in its field

Quality of written English: Needs some language corrections before being published

Statistical review: No, the manuscript does not need to be seen by a statistician.