The authors acceptably addressed my recommendations. One final comment (suggestion)--I continue to believe that additional discussion of gender differences may strengthen the paper. I recognize that the authors added information about gender differences at baseline (such as in the table and brief discussion). However, it may be important also to address any potential differences at follow up. I did not see this discussed. For example, men were significantly heavier smokers than women at baseline. Did males have lower quit rates than females? I think there are key gender issues that have not been addressed that may spark higher interest in the paper.
