Title: Cystic colon duplication causing intussusception in a 25-year-old man: report of a case and review of the literature

Version: 2 Date: 25 November 2009

Reviewer: Christoph Kettelhack

Reviewer's report:

This is an interesting case report of a very rare combination of 2 situations in adults - colonic invagination and cystic colon duplication. The case is presented in a clear and understandable form. The figures are very good and this helps the reader to memorize this situation. I support the publication of this manuscript.

English language is generally acceptable. Nonetheless, review of the manuscript by the authors themselves is recommended for minor language corrections. For example on page 5: "The subsequent CT scan showed an invagination of the ascending colon where rectal contrast enema passing no further (Figure 1)" changed to "The subsequent CT scan showed an invagination of the ascending colon with rectal contrast enema passing no further (Figure 1)"

Level of interest: An article whose findings are important to those with closely related research interests

Quality of written English: Needs some language corrections before being published

Statistical review: No, the manuscript does not need to be seen by a statistician.
