Reviewer's report:

I thank the authors for their effort to carry out the requested changes. In the review of Dieter Hahnloser you can find a very essential question: What would you do different the next time? Please make your conclusion therefor more clear.

For example like this:

In conclusion bowel intussusceptions and gastrointestinal duplications are rare but have to be kept in mind in the differential diagnosis of an acute abdomen in adults. As in every abdominal mass lesion underlying malignancy has to be considered. Therefore an oncological resection should be planned. Especially the right-sided colectomy can be performed as oncological resection without impairment of postoperative function or increased morbidity.
