Title: Feeding, stoolsing and sleeping patterns in infants with colic - a randomized controlled trial of minimal acupuncture

Version: 4 Date: 15 July 2011

Reviewer's report:

Thank you for your detailed responses to my comments. I have no more major revisions. One single comment, which I would classify as a "discretionary revision", is that as a biostatistician, I feel obligated to point out that even when baseline differences do not differ between groups, an analysis of "change scores" from baseline, or (better) an analysis of follow-up scores adjusted for the baseline values, may yield more power to detect differences than an unadjusted analysis of follow-up scores. However, this is your call and I am OK with the analysis as it stands.
