Title: Resident Interest and Factors Involved in Entering a Pediatric Pulmonary Fellowship

Version: 1 Date: 30 April 2004

Reviewer's report:

This is a very timely article in that presently there is a great demand for Pediatric Pulmonologist in this country. I question its importance since the residents that were questioned all attended the same program. From my personal experience alot of what influences a resident to pursue a fellowship is directly related to the attending style at the resident's program. Not many residents usually choose to pursue a fellowship program if the attending at their residency program in that specialty is not a dynamic role model or excellent mentor. If this paper is to be accepted for publication the authors must discuss this point in their manuscript.
