Title: We are bitter, but we are better off: case study of the implementation of an electronic health record system into a mental health hospital in England

Version: 3 Date: 28 October 2012

Reviewer’s report:

The revised paper is more precise in stating its purpose, and also clarifies sufficiently both aspects related to the mental health context and to the underlying theoretical perspectives guiding research. As these were my main concerns, I have now no further comments to the paper.

While the reference list is already fairly long (and perhaps could be reduced), I want to draw the authors attention to a paper on (EHR adoption) that would support their theoretical agenda:

Level of interest: An article of importance in its field

Quality of written English: Acceptable

Statistical review: No, the manuscript does not need to be seen by a statistician.
