Reviewer's report:

I have nothing else to add than this is an article of importance in its field. It is well written and interesting to read. It is important to focus on this patient group. It is interesting to see that with a few questions it is possible to differentiate clients into groups according to needs. It is important to have a CM methodology for this unique disability. It will help healthcare providers to understand the various needs for services among adults with the DSL and hopefully policy makers who make financial arrangements.

Level of interest: An article of importance in its field
