Title: Clinical risk management in mental health: a systematic overview of main risks and related management practices

Version: 2 Date: 27 October 2012

Reviewer: Matthew Large

Reviewer's report:

The paper is a relief from the torrent of largely useless papers about individual risk violence and suicide risk assessment.

I wonder if the authors would like to consider defining clinical risk management in order to further differentiate their work from papers about the clinical risk of individual patients - to my eyes the paper is about organisational risk management in mental health care.

Level of interest: An article of importance in its field
