Reviewer's report:

This paper deals with different issues, but its methodology is very similar to the previous one. Actually, the main weakness related to the vagueness of the sample and consequent difficulty with generalizing and interpreting the results is the same as before.

Portions of the text in the introductions are also same or very much similar to each other.

The word multivariate in “multivariate analysis by logistic regression” is inappropriate. It is just a multiple logistic regression or just a logistic model with several variables, nothing more (multivariate logistic model would deal with modeling several dichotomous responses at once, accounting for their interrelationships).
