Title: Job Satisfaction among Public Health Professionals Working in Public Sector: A Cross sectional Study from Pakistan.

Version: 1 Date: 7 August 2012

Reviewer: Walid Abubaker

Reviewer's report:

The Issue of job satisfaction is clear and supported by quantitative and qualitative data. Sample size is sufficient. The methods used are adequate for the study purpose. Supportive tables and figures are useful. The only question concerning conclusions is the policy implication and use of evidence generated by the study to improve and increase job satisfaction among health workers in the public sector. How to get the message across to policy makers to translate specific recommendations into practice with possible scenarios for improvement of job satisfaction.
