Title: Thailand special recruitment track of medical students: assessment of the three batches of new graduates

Version: 1 Date: 23 April 2013

Reviewer’s report:

Major compulsory revision
1. The authors said they used random samples for the study. But there were 576 (32.3%), 872 (59.0%) and 754 (44.9%) cases selected from the population in 2010, 2011 and 2012. It seems that they asked the graduates who accepted to respond to the questionnaire to be samples and they came out in different response rates. It's unclear how they did a random sample.

Minor essential revisions
1. There are fourteen competencies being asked but the figure 2 showed only 5 competencies. It's better to show all.
