Reviewer’s report

Title: Factitious Lymphoedema - A psychiatric condition mimicking Reflex Sympathetic Dystrophy: A case report

Version: 3 Date: 4 February 2008

Reviewer: Robert Hunter

Is this case worth reporting?: Yes

Comments to authors:

REVIEW:
I have read and undertaken a careful review of this case report. It has merit in that it is brief and to the point but also fairly interesting. I have some knowledge of this area have published earlier in my career in this area. This paper is likely to be of interest to those working in A&E depts. (ER facilities) or drug abuse settings who see regularly factitious cases; it will also be of interest to liaison psychiatry teams. I thought that perhaps the literature review in which to set the case could have been more comprehensive; but on balance I would support publication and have no significant criticisms to make on this occasion. It does not require any substantive amendments.

What next?: Accept

Quality of written English: Acceptable