Author's response to reviews

Title: Spontaneous pneumothorax from cryptococcal pneumonia in systemic sclerosis: a case report

Authors:

Kwanreuthai Sripavatakul Dr. (neng042@hotmail.com)
Chingching Foocharoen Dr. (fching@kku.ac.th)

Version: 4 Date: 5 January 2011

Author's response to reviews:

Chingching Foocharoen fching@kku.ac.th
Assistant Professor, Internal Medicine
Faculty of Medicine, Khon Kaen University
Khon Kaen, 40002, Thailand
66-85-007-5323 or 66-43-363746
JMCR Editorial team
Journal of Medical Case Reports
Dear Sir/Madam:
Re: Manuscript 8690019434357491 entitled “Spontaneous pneumothorax from cryptococcal pneumonia in systemic sclerosis: a case report”
Thank you for your letter dated January 5, 2011. We appreciated the comments and have made changes as advised. We have highlighted in yellow the areas where changes have been made and used “Track changes” to show what was changed.

Reviewer: 1
Comments to authors:
The revised manuscript addresses the concerns of the 1st reviewer. Though improved, there is still a problem with the English, mostly in the newly added parts.
Examples:
"Spontaneous pneumothorax is mostly found in persons with systemic sclerosis who have extensive pulmonary fibrosis with enlarged subpleural blebs.” "mostly" should be "usually" "We report on a case of spontaneous pneumothorax from cryptococcal pneumonia in a patient with systemic sclerosis with minimal subpleural emphysema.” "from" should be "caused by" The oxygen saturation of the room air at admission was 92%.” "of" should be "on" etc...
Response: The language has been re-reviewed as below

Spontaneous pneumothorax is usually found in persons with systemic sclerosis who have extensive pulmonary fibrosis with enlarged subpleural blebs. We report on a case of spontaneous pneumothorax caused by cryptococcal pneumonia in a patient with systemic sclerosis with minimal subpleural emphysema.

The oxygen saturation on the room air at admission was 92%.

This completes the responses to the peer reviewers. Should there be any omissions or other concerns, please let us know.

Sincerely,

Chingching Foocharoen