Title: Metronidazole Induced Encephalopathy in patient with infectious colitis: a case report

Version: 1 Date: 10 August 2010

Comments to authors:

This is an interesting case report, but it is a need for revision before the manuscript can be considered for publication.

The author mix experimental and clinical informations during the whole manuscript. This should be clearly separated as that are different source of information: e.g. the midazolam in dogs section can be omitted.

For the reader it is therefore not clear what new information can be drawn from this case report. This should be clearly stated in discussion and conclusion. In addition, some information are false like "penetrate the CSF..." and should be corrected. The authors should make great efforts to discuss the really new things of the case reports and shorten the discussion that is currently too much "book chapter" and without any context to the case report. All in all: Good case, but the manuscript needs still work until it can be published.
