Title: Transient Ischaemic Attack: A qualitative study of the long term consequences for patients

Version: 3 Date: 11 July 2014

Reviewer: Surinder Singh

Reviewer's report:

My report (please find attached) details my thoughts about the paper and I have used the headings suggested on the website. The vast majority of my comments - which really amount to further clarification - are relatively minor and I have stated this clearly.

My view is that this paper should be published - on the basis that there is now more and more evidence accumulating about the longer-term consequences of a TIA; the "transient" in TIA may not be something we talk about in years to come.

Level of interest: An article whose findings are important to those with closely related research interests

Quality of written English: Needs some language corrections before being published

Statistical review: No, the manuscript does not need to be seen by a statistician.
