I think this is a well written paper reporting a substantial qualitative study and worthy of publication. I only have one point where I think the manuscript could be improved.

The main weakness in this study was the sampling which, despite the strategies employed, failed to reach more vulnerable and isolated older people. This is acknowledged in the discussion but should also be visible in the results section. This could be achieved by an extra column in the demographic table which labels individuals as group attenders or not or some additional text in the results section describing the response to the recruitment strategies.
