Reviewer's report: An investigation of factors predicting the type of bladder antimuscarinics initiated in Medicare nursing homes residents R2
The aim of this study was to investigate sex based differences in the prescription of bladder antimuscarinics in nursing homes.
The authors have made extensive alterations to the paper once more, in response to the reviewers comments.
The modifications to the test regarding clinical trials could have been simplified by just altering the references quoted, which the authors have partly done, but never mind.
There are s couple of editorial typos but these do not need author correction; this is an editorial matter.
The paper is otherwise interesting
