Title: Are people in residential care entitled to receive rehabilitation services following hip fracture? Views of the public from a citizens’ jury

Version: 0 Date: 14 Apr 2020

Reviewer: Jan Visschedijk

Reviewer's report:

I have read the manuscript. Though the topic is interesting, I think it is not suitable for publication in BMC-geriatrics.

- The article it a nice description of a process of using the general public for policy making. The scientific impact is, however, minimal.

- The results of the process are what I would consider "common practise" and to be found in many national guidelines in relation to hip fractures. For instance, all the "Buts" (table2) are more or less included in our current guidelines.

- The article is very much focussed on the Australian situation. I doubt whether it is applicable to many other settings.

- I would advise the author to submit the manuscript to a journal which focuses more on health policy issues, or an Australian journal.
