Reviewer's report:

Dear authors,

I complement you on the changes made and the clear and concise response to my comments. I rejected the paper at first, but both the changes and response made me change my mind. You have given me the insight to re-read the article from a different lens (a phrasing that you use in your response). It has become much clearer what your intentions were with this paper and how theory, methodology and the aim are aligned, and how your analysis is grounded in a theoretical framework. As I stated in my first review, addressing safety is very relevant. With the changes you made I now assess the research as sound and well executed, as well as properly discussed, and I advise to accept the paper.
