Reviewer's report:

I have reviewed the manuscript entitled "Pregnant mothers are more anemic than lactating mothers, a comparative cross-sectional study". Overall the authors performed a good job, but the manuscript needs to be improved.

1) Did the degree of anemia differ according to the gestational age among pregnant women? (for example patients in the 3rd trimester of pregnancy are more anemic than patients in first-second trimesters, etc.) This should be shared and discussed.

2) What were the reasons for not receiving iron supplementation? These should be stated.

3) In their patient cohort, especially for the pregnant women, did the authors witness any morbidities and mortalities which could be attributed to anemia during the follow-up? This should be stated as well.
