This manuscript describes a case report on two sibling with typical features of VDEGS caused by a previously reported mutation in SCARF2. The authors rightly suggest that joint laxity, recurrent patellar dislocation, and short distal ulnae should be included in the diagnosis of VDEGS. However, patellar dislocation and short distal ulnae have been reported previously in other patients with VDEGS leaving joint laxity as the only novel feature. I therefore, feel that this report adds very little knowledge to the literature.
