Title: EFFECTS OF FACTOR V LEIDEN POLYMORPHISM ON THE PATHOGENESIS AND OUTCOMES OF PREECLAMPSIA

Version: 0 Date: 24 Apr 2019

Reviewer: Venkateshwar Ananthapur

Reviewer's report:

* According to the author the incidence of Preeclampsia seems to be high enough in the area of sampling but still the subjects included in the study were very low to draw the conclusion that was mentioned in the manuscript.

* The author suggests that the patients with PE are indirectly affected by the gene FVL but still there is a need to find the cyclic reaction that could take place during the inflammation in pregnancy rather than just mentioning the plausibility. A direct statement without an authentic reference to support the given conclusion is not justifiable.

* Over all the presentation of the paper was not appropriate.

* There are few grammatical mistakes that needs to be rectified in the manuscript
