Title: Leptospirosis Presenting As Haemolytic Uraemic Syndrome

Version: 0 Date: 26 Mar 2017

Reviewer’s report:

This is an interesting article reporting a leptospirosis case with Haemolytic Uraemic Syndrome. This paper may be considered for publication by incorporating the following modifications.

1. Latest terminology related to species should be followed throughout the manuscript.

2. In background line 10, 11 and 12 Leptospira should be italicized

3. In line 10 and 11 hardjo should be mentioned as Hardjo and icterohaemorrhagiae as Icterohaemorrhagiae respectively.

4. What is the reactive serovar observed in MAT. It will be informative to have this information.

5. Since they don't have the information about isolation of leptospires, therefore If they have MAT titre with paired sera that information will be more helpful for the determination of the infecting serovar.

6. In line 21 E-Coli should be changed as Escherichia coli and italicized.

7. About the day of hospital admission and the day of sampling from the date of illness is needed along with case description.

8. References should be up to date and I didn't see any latest updates after 2013.

9. The length of discussion may be shortened.
